

The Anabolic Doc RAW And Uncensored

By Thomas O'Connor, M.D.

PHOTO SARA MAJIDY

Steroid-Testing High School kids... WHAT A FUCKING JOKE!

It's that time again, folks— yes it's the Anabolic Doc 411 and you can bet the buttons on your panties that I am going to set shit on fire here. This month I am going to break some more balls on what I call one of the biggest wastes of taxpayers' money. Oh yeah, and what adds some spice to it all is that it focuses on drugs in sports. Oh boy, the media cannot get enough of this topic because in America, steroid users are criminals and lowlifes!

Anyway, I want to talk a little bit about something that is going on in high schools across this country. Nope, I am not here to talk about the reality of teenage pregnancy. I am not going to talk about how in America we have the highest rate of teen pregnancies in the world, which closes in at around 800,000 cases per year. Wow— that's a lot of little bastards (no pun intended... yeah, right) running around. I am also not going to talk about the fact that in America, one in four teenage girls carries a sexually-transmitted disease that spreads to a plethora of new sexual partners. Why would I want to talk about something important that affects our youth like these topics, when I can waste your time and of course your tax dollars talking about something way, way more important?

I am going to talk about steroid testing high-school athletes. The United States government finds this more important than 15-year-old Jimmy Johnson contracting genital herpes and how this will affect the country and the fledgling economy 10 years from now, when he passes it on to another dozen or so ex-girlfriends. No, that's not important at all. Unless, that is, you are one of Jimmy's past flings now in dire need of some Valtrex.

Who gives a shit if these kids smoke pot until they burn out every last fucking brain cell in their heads, but hey, we have to make sure they play fair and don't touch steroids.

Is This Guy for Real, or What?

In New Jersey, Texas and Illinois, they have actually been steroid-testing high school athletes and students to see if they are using any performance-enhancing drugs. Oh yeah, since the high schools across this vast land are just loaded to the gills with boys and girls sporting 24-inch biceps, I can see why this is held in such great importance. Illinois Governor Pat Quinn signed into a law an expansion of the state's existing testing program for steroids and stimulants, so-called performance-enhancing drugs, part of a nationwide trend to ensure boys and girls are not using performance-enhancing drugs.

Who gives a shit if these kids smoke pot until they burn out every last fucking brain cell in their heads, but hey, we have to make sure they play fair and don't touch steroids. Why is it that we don't see this same anti-drug fervor for hard drugs, which have penetrated our youth much more than any steroid ever has?

Now don't get me wrong here, I am 100 percent against teenagers using any performance-enhancing drugs. If that's what you decide you want to do later in life, then you should wait until you are over 21. This is not only for medical reasons but also for because of mental maturity issues. But the problem is that there is so much emphasis on something that is not an epidemic. As much as the fearmonger politicians would like you to believe, steroids and growth hormone are not taking over high school kids in large numbers. They never have and in my humble opinion, never will. STD's are spreading among high school kids like a California wildfire but hey, you better make sure that 'Billy the High School

LATEST
CONTEST COVERAGE!

ONLY AT
muscular development.com

The AnabolicDOC—RAW and Uncensored

Quarterback' didn't take any prohormones, because that wouldn't be fair to the other players and definitely not accepted by society.

Purest Heroin in the World!

Let's take a quick look at what is happening in Texas. In little over a year, they have drug-tested close to 46,000 students. In all this time, a measly 19 students tested positive and the really good thing is that it only cost the taxpayers a paltry $3 million dollars. What is $3 million dollars, knowing that they got the no-good delinquent cheaters off the 'virgin' playing fields of high schools across the great state of Texas? If we do some simple arithmetic here, that means it cost close to $160,000 to catch each of those 19 players. Hell, I just love when my hard-earned tax dollars are wasted on such utter bullshit!

In New Jersey, the stats are even better. In close to three years of making students 'piss in cups,' it has netted a whopping two students who tested positive for steroids. Hell, at least they only spent a little over $300,000 on this "Operation Clean Student" project.

Now taking some prime information from the DEA, it is well documented that in 'Dirty Jersey' (it's such a beautiful state, too, by the way... sorry for the sarcasm) that heroin is the most prevalent drug of abuse. The majority of these heroin users are between the ages of 16-25 at the mind-boggling rate of over twice the national average. Holy shit, Batman, the high school boys and girls of New Jersey love heroin so much that they top the charts in usage per capita over every other state.

Maybe Testing Students for Heroin Would Be A Smarter Choice?

Yeah, spending money on getting Deca Durabolin and Winstrol out of schools is a wise choice when heroin is flooding your streets and turning your kids into junkies looking for their next fix. Here is a story that made the headlines just last year.

New Jersey honor roll student Jessica Polmann, who started using heroin at the ripe age of 13, used to trade her body in prostitution with drug dealers and men in their 50s to help pay for her next hit. I don't think there are too many high school kids trading blowjobs for their next cycle of Anavar, but it's nice how steroids get the bad rap in the media when there are worse things to worry about. With all this information brought to the surface, can you now see why I get so aggravated when the politicians put their focus on steroids when drugs like heroin are destroying the moral fabric of society— above and beyond what steroids could ever hope to do.

In fact, not once but twice New Jersey has been blessed with the dubious distinction of having the purest heroin of any other state in America. To see exactly what I mean, let's take a look at a quote from a top DEA agent involved in getting it off the streets.

"You can't buy any better heroin in the world than you can buy in New Jersey," said Michael Pasterchick, special agent in charge of the Newark DEA office.

Well, I guess good ol' Jersey is number one in the world for something. Our good friend Mr. Pasterchick isn't bullshitting either when he says this, because according to tests done on heroin seized on the streets of New Jersey, it scored a 71.4 percent purity rating. This purity rating was close to double the national average, once again. Wow— those sure are some interesting facts if I do say so myself.

In the 'Sunshine State' of Florida, they spent over $100,000 of your hard-earned dollars to bust— oh yeah, can I get a fucking drumroll here, folks— one student! Oh boy, this just keeps getting better and better, doesn't it?

But the Grand Puba of success is our one-and-only glorious 'Corn State' Illinois, which spent in excess of $150,000 only to catch a big whopping zero students who tested positive for performance-enhancing drugs!

The Anabolic DOC—RAW and Uncensored

TEAM MD RADIO WITH FLEX WHEELER & SHAWN RAY

MMUSCULAR
DDEVELOPMENT
EVERY MONDAY
4PM. PST/ 7PM. EST

Yep that is right, you heard it here first. There is nothing like taking $150,000 and pissing it into the wind. But hey, they are the 'Lincoln State,' the 'Garden of the West' and without a doubt the 'Sucker State' if I have ever seen one.

Now That's Money Well Spent!

Hey, I am a doctor and not a mathematician— so I may be slightly off with my numbers here, but if we add this all up over the three states that participated in this 'Ultimate Waste' program, it only came out to about 3,560,000 taxpayer dollars to implement this lovely program that without a doubt will 'Save our Kids' from the horrors of steroid use.

Let me see here for a minute, couldn't this money have been better spent on something else. Hmm... how about spending that 3.5 million-plus dollars on something like feeding the homeless? No, that wouldn't be a good idea. Who cares about them anyway, since they are the scourge of society.

How about spending some of that tax money to take care of our war veterans? Corporal Joe Smith here just lost his fucking leg in an IED incident just south of Fallujah, and now he gets to come home to a nice foreclosure on his house, a whore of a wife who is fucking his best friend, and ends up sleeping in a rusted out 1982 Honda Civic eating a can of pork and beans for his only meal of the day.

Yeah, we wouldn't want to spend these tax dollars on him to help him get through the tough times after sacrificing his leg for the red, white and blue. That would be stupid to help him out when we could use this money for something much more worthwhile like, let me see... oh, how about drug-testing high school female volleyball players. What the fuck was I thinking!

Yes, let's spend those $3.5 million and another $3.5 million next year to make sure that steroids do not get a foothold in the youth of America. Even though marijuana, heroin and sexually-transmitted diseases have already planted their grimy feet firmly in the hearts and minds of the youth in this country. But as long as they don't take steroids, every other social catastrophe will just work its way out.

One person who has his head on straight and knows the deal is Dr. Norm Fost, a pediatrician and bioethicist of the University of Wisconsin. To quote the good doctor from his interview with MSNBC, "But the move to test is based on 'mass hysteria and phenomenal hyperbole.' This is just like 'Reefer Madness,' likening the push to the Depression-era anti-marijuana film which depicted high school students who turned into murderous lunatics."

Wow— finally someone in the medical field who doesn't have his head up the ass of every politician this side of the Mason-Dixon Line. Like it or not, I call 'em like I see 'em and this is the biggest load of bullshit this side of the Mississippi. You may not agree with me here, but I am one of the few people in this country who has the balls to speak the truth! It is this mismanagement of our tax dollars that is the real crime. There are needy people in this country who need financial help for many different reasons, and they get the cold shoulder on every level. Then useless programs like these get the green light, which cost millions of dollars and ultimately accomplishes nothing. What a fucking waste!

Until next month, train like a beast, stay healthy and try not to drown in the media diarrhea that plagues our airwaves. This is the Anabolic Doc signing off... keeping it fucking real! ■

References:

- Associated Press. 1 in 4 teenage girls has a sexually-transmitted disease.
- Alexander B. Student Steroid Tests get "F," say some Experts, MSNBC.com.
- Roberts A. Steroid Times, September 1, 2009.
- New Jersey Street heroin Purest in the Nation, Jointogether.org.
- Calefati J. Heroin hits the suburbs hard amid wave of drug abuse by teens. US News.com, December 5, 2008.